

bp starts up Atlantis Major Facility Expansion project in Gulf of America

30 July 2026

bp has started up its Atlantis Major Facility Expansion project in the US Gulf of America.

Atlantis is located about 150 miles south of New Orleans and has been in production for nearly 20 years. The expansion project adds two new subsea water injection wells to help increase the pressure of targeted reservoirs, unlocking additional barrels and extending the producing life of one of bp's flagship US offshore assets.

"Atlantis has been one of the anchors of our Gulf business for nearly two decades, and this expansion proves there is still more value to be generated," said Andy Krieger, senior vice president for the Gulf of America and Canada. "We're extending the life of a great asset while supporting jobs and investment in the region — all while making the most of infrastructure that's already in place."

The project, which was delivered ahead of schedule and under budget, adds approximately 10,000 barrels of oil equivalent per day (boe/d) of gross peak annualized average production, with around 5,000 boe/d net to bp.

bp recently sanctioned two new production platforms, Kaskida and Tiber, which together are expected to add 160,000 barrels per day of new oil production capacity in the US offshore region by the end of 2030.

Notes to editors

- bp is a leading producer in the deepwater Gulf of America, operating five production platforms: Argos, Atlantis, Mad Dog, Na Kika and Thunder Horse.
- The Atlantis field was discovered in 1998.
- The Atlantis Major Facility Expansion project adds two new water injection wells, new subsea trees, and new water injection pumps on the topsides of the Atlantis platform.
- It also enables future water injection capability at the Atlantis platform.
- The Atlantis platform operates in 7,074 feet of water.
- bp is the operator of Atlantis with a 56% working interest. Co-owner Woodside Energy holds the remaining 44%.
